Precautions Against Assassination. There is, so lar as we can see, no possible meth od of pre enting a repetition of such a orime short of locking up the sovereign in a well guarded prison. The bowling has permanently beaten the batting. Modern science has applied itself to the work of destruc ion, and there is no longer any possibility of proteoting a life for which a resolute enemy is willing to give his own. The use of the knife can be prevented for it presupp sis intact; and what with guards rapid d. wing and incessant wa chifulness, con' c be weed a sovereign and an ener my can be rendered nectly, if not daile, impost sible. The sovereign oan be armed too, and can mak as good a fight for his life against the dagger as any other soldier. Ev a the uso of the rifle can be prevented, partly by armor, partly by mailed earning a and partly by the constant interpetition of attendants between the soverage and any point from which he could be threatened. It used to be said of Napoleon, as he drove up the Champs Elysees. that it was impossible to "cover" nim with a sick, and that was very nearly, though not h eral, true. No man along the him could have drawe a pistol without some Corsidae 8 e ing him. The movements of grands district the r - ksman, who, though he does not care whether he kills the ignocent or not, do sex caedingly care out to miss his aim. Bu n wher h se precautions, nor any other, are of avail against one or two men throwing in succession bombs powerful en uch to blow up a carriage or stater a crowd. There are always poin sat which a cavalor to really enters a pass, or approach a some unforescen angle, and assessing stationed at the side have only, as it were, to pitch a cricket ball tolerab y straight, to chaque the succession to the throne. If the mu deter knows how to measure distance, the speed of the carriage is useless, the iron plates give way, the guards are dear oyed like him they guard, and the sovereign is sinin as he would be slain if a shell reached him in the midst of armies. Of course, if by any chases he laves the curriage, the chapces are increased by his mobility. The only c nditions required are that the mesassing shell be carelety of escape, hat they shall have bombs, and that they shall just have nerve enough at the moment to pirch straight; and none of these conditions can be absolutely prevented. True courage is hardly required, only a kind of resignation, very comston in some . 2:8, especially among women. Faw of the assassing of recent days have cared to esoure.
